

The Post-Election Reckoning: Seven Steps to Restore the Republic

I've got some bad news for people hoping that America goes "back to normal" after this election. For better or worse our country will never be the same. Worse news is that IF the deep state manages to defeat Trump we will enter a season of intense "ideological cleansing" when every value we constitutionalists hold dear will be attacked like never before, and conservative leaders and "influencers" will be suppressed, "cancelled" and punished as savagely as the "moderates" in the ruling elites will permit. Antifa storm troopers may be put back in their cage for a while, but BLM with its "critical race theory" agenda certainly won't, and Big Tech and Big Media will remain the primary tools for defining "reality" to the sizable plurality of the public who can't think for themselves. Their monopoly and censorship tactics will be institutionalized at the expense of what remains of the First, Second, Fourth, Ninth and Tenth Amendments.

Don't be lulled into a false sense of security by the voices claiming the Democrats have been neutered by stunning losses in the Congress and other down-ballot races. If the policy direction of the left was truly dictated by public opinion then we would never have "drifted" so far to the left over the past century. Instead, the Marxist left has ALWAYS pursued its "tide of history" dogma and strategy, in which the fulfilment of their narratives is assumed to be as inevitable as the rising sun, and public opinion is something to be conformed to those narratives through propaganda, psychological manipulation, and incremental policy changes. There has never been any "drift" in this process: the Marxists have always had a largely unseen but constant grip on the cultural rudder. Public resistance only influences the speed of transformation.

The two party system (in which the same elites – e.g. Bush and Clinton -- own the establishment of both sides) plays a big part in this. When they think they can get away with rapid change, the elites shift up to Democrat, such as when George HW Bush intentionally lost to Bill Clinton in 1992. When the public starts to squirm with discomfort, they downshift to Republican and coast for a while – in the same direction, of course – until the public gets acclimated to the new normal, such as occurred under George W.. Then came massive acceleration under Obama, against whom Romney and McCain were (like Bob Dole before them) token opponents chosen to "take a dive" in their respective races while showcasing the "inadequacy of conservatism in the face of progressive values."

But megalomaniac Obama went too fast, triggering a political backlash that spawned the Tea Party rebellion in 2009, which grew into global populist counter-revolution, and culminated in Brexit and the election of Donald Trump in '16. And in their panic ever since, the entire Marxist machine has been devoted to driving Trump out by any possible means.

Everything truly hangs on Trump. If he is removed, we face persecution domestically and the completion of the transition to global government internationally. If he wins, we have a continuation of the reprieve God granted to us in 2016.

This summary confronts us with two inescapable truths. A) Marxism and Constitutionalism are contradictory and mutually exclusive ideologies: one must prevail at the expense of the other and peaceful co-existence is impossible. B) America's polarization has reached its zenith and "civil war" (with or without some degree of armed struggle) is inevitable.

What then must constitutionalists do if/when Donald Trump's re-election is confirmed? The obvious but uncomfortable answer is we must purge the Marxists from the seats of power in all of our institutions – as gently but firmly as possible, but without hesitation or compromise. If we do not begin that immediately and continue doggedly until the nation is fully restored to constitutionalism, then the cancer of Marxism will come back just as surely as Hebrew half-measures against Canaanite demonology allowed it grow back until it overwhelmed the spiritual/cultural immune system of the nation of ancient Israel.

This is OUR COUNTRY bequeathed to us individually and collectively on the condition that we preserve it in the form in which it was created: A CONSTITUTIONAL REPUBLIC.

Thus, I urge seven steps to restore the peoples' sovereignty during Trump's second term:

1. Immediate enforcement of the laws of sedition and treason against all the co-conspirators in the 2020 Election Fraud Coup (which logically includes all of the core players behind the Russian Collusion Hoax – we don't need Deep-State-Durham).

2. Legislation imposing regulations on all news journalism – as opposed to opinion journalism – imposing strict requirements that ensure fair and balanced coverage in which all significant parties with a clear interest in the public perception of issues and controversies are represented in terms that accurately represent their perspectives: every story, every time or clearly label it an editorial.

3. Legislation imposing similar standards on public education institutions, administrators and faculty, with additional components to, first, ensure that the topics and perspectives most heavily censored in the past receive special attention to overcome accumulated bias, and, second, impose swift disciplinary action including dismissal of those who defy the regulations. Again, this would mandate balance, not a switch to new forms of one-sided propaganda.

4. Anti-trust action against Big Tech organizations to break their monopolistic stranglehold, in combination with...

5. Nationalization of the Internet as a public resource comparable to National Parks and subject to the same types of laws and policies that ensure it is used and managed in the public interest, consistent with the Bill of Rights.

6. Abolishment of public employee unions.

7. Establishment of a stringent uniform mandatory constitutional literacy exam to graduate high school, including a working knowledge of the writings and culture of the founding fathers, using primary sources, and age appropriate preparatory competency and tracking exams in each lower grade.

These steps can begin the restoration of the republic if we have the boldness to pursue them.

ps. As a former practicing constitutional law attorney, I firmly believe each of these items can be implemented in a manner that is consistent with the constitution.

What follows is in Show #126

When the Obergefell v Hodges “gay marriage” ruling came down in 2015, Obama said “justice arrives like a thunderbolt.” But, of course, nothing that defies the law of God is just, and Obama is a liar. Indeed, it can be said of Obama and all his election-stealing partners and their minions that they epitomize what Jesus said in John 8:44: “[They] belong to [their] father, the devil, and [they] want to carry out his desires. He was a murderer from the beginning, refusing to uphold the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he lies, he speaks his native language, because he is a liar and the father of lies.”

Lying is the language that Big Media and Big Tech has been speaking almost exclusively since Trump became president: deliberate falsehoods, misrepresentations, distractions, diversions, suppression of dissent, amplification of false witnesses, accusations that truth-tellers are guilty of exactly the crimes they themselves are committing, and multi-faceted, multi-dimensional coordination of this campaign within a vast network of co-conspirators. We are literally witnessing corruption of Biblical proportions.

Nothing the Devil does is creative. He can only spin counterfeit alternatives to what God has created, and try to preempt God's plan by putting his counterfeit out first, like Obama did.

BUT there is true “justice that arrives like a thunderbolt” on its way in the American culture war. And it's about to strike!

Just this morning, former CIA intelligence analyst and strong Trump supporter Larry C Johnson has published a highly persuasive article suggesting that Bill Barr is about to bring the hammer down on the crooks behind the election fraud. Conservatives have grown increasingly frustrated with Barr over the past months for what they perceive as a reluctance to take action on the obvious “alleged” criminal conduct of the anti-Trump conspirators. I agree, it would have been helpful politically for indictments to have come down on numerous individuals involved in the now-exposed conspiracy to defraud the FISA court and to sabotage the Trump administration. BUT, that may be the exact reason why they haven’t happened ... yet.

If the Justice Department is to tackle the biggest politically-motivated criminal conspiracy in American history, it cannot itself be tainted with the perception of political bias in the administration of justice. Of course, nothing will prevent the left from insisting that the prosecution of their fellow travelers is political, but whatever fair-minded people are left in this country will almost certainly consider Bill Barr’s refusal to bring charges before the election as a pretty solid defense to that charge.

There’s also the reality of the “prosecutor worldview” which the public doesn’t easily grasp. Veteran prosecutors who handle big criminal conspiracy cases – like Rudy Giuliani did in Mafia-controlled New York City in the 1980s – live in a world where there’s usually just one chance to cast their net, and so they want to ensure they catch as many co-conspirators as possible when they finally pull the trigger. As soon as they act, the whole network scatters like roaches into cracks and holes where they start destroying evidence as fast as possible.

Prosecutors also want the net to include the top crooks, who are usually masters at ensuring there is minimal evidence of their involvement. Getting the goods on them takes time.

In the matter of the Great Election Theft of 2020, the conspiracy is much, much bigger than what the Durham investigation uncovered, and it’s ultimate object – the theft of the presidency by voter fraud – needed to play out to fruition, which was technically today, November 12th, the last day (in North Carolina) of late vote counting of all the Democrat vote-by-mail counting extensions.

Today the conspiratorial effort – the crime itself -- is complete as to the evidence of voter fraud in all of its myriad forms. There is certainly evidence still uncovered, but all the actors have played their parts, the crime is done, and it’s just a matter of tying the case together in one package. There will be additional crimes related to the inevitable cover-up and damage control efforts of individual conspirators, but as of now, the waiting game is over for the Justice Department.

There’s another aspect of this I want to highlight, and that is the “shock and awe” strategy of Donald Trump when it comes to proving his case to the public. I first explained it in my article “President Trump’s October Surprise Party” relating to the Hunter Biden laptop scandals.

It works like this:

First came the prediction of a MOAB (mother of all bombs) about to fall on the enemy (i.e. the announcement that Hunter’s personal laptop – filled with shocking material – was in the Trump team’s possession). Then a series of single-bite, lesser impact breaking stories hit one after the other like the first drops of rain in an imminent massing thunderstorm. These were bait to start all the leftist pundits jumping to Hunter’s defense on the grounds that the evidence was weak and meritless. Then, once all their necks were in the noose, the storm clouds opened and the deluge began. All they could do was seek cover while pretending the storm was a hoax.

Then came the coup de grace in the form of photos and videos so shocking and salacious they drew every eye in America to see the evidence for themselves – exposing the leftist media and tech giants as liars literally caught in the act.

Trump has set them all up again with the election fraud scandal: first a MOAB in the form of a vague but grand voter-fraud conspiracy theory, then a dribble of lesser pieces of evidence to lure in the spin-masters, then just in the past couple of days, the storm clouds have begun to open up. The deluge has just started. Mark my words, this storm will be huge and lots of bad guys are going to be held accountable for their crimes and their lies.

So pop some corn, warm your feet by the fireplace (all ablaze with the burning ruins of the traitorous Fox News Corporation), and snuggle in for the lightning show of a lifetime. Justice – true justice – is about to arrive like a thunderbolt.
